Burma: Plotting by former civilian officials may reinforce General Ne Win's disinclination to loosen the reins of his military regime.

Former prime minister U Nu, ousted by Ne Win in the 1962 coup, is planning to agitate from Thailand for the ouster of Ne Win. U Nu is bitter over Ne Win's failure to follow through on earlier indications that he might incorporate civilians into the government.

U Nu has been in India since April, ostensibly on a religious pilgrimage.

25X1

U Nu's record of indecisiveness and ineffectiveness suggests that his efforts will not pose a serious threat to Ne Win. Their major effect will be to strengthen the arguments of Ne Win's military colleagues for excluding civilians from the government.
